Safety Tip

The heat of the summer can be tough for both exhibitors and cattle, especially this year. However, there are ways to help keep you and your cattle comfortable until the cooler weather of fall.

At home, make sure you and your cattle both stay hydrated. Cattle may need to drink more often than at every feeding. Hydration is important to not only help the cattle stay cool, but it also helps to keep them healthy and eating. It is also essential for you to stay hydrated when dealing with your animals. If an owner is going to be out washing, walking, or just out with their animals, they must stay cool as well as their animals. Make sure that whether your animals are in a barn or turned outside, they have plenty of shade and water.

Most exhibitors will not have access to a cold room. If this is the case, fans help to circulate air throughout a barn. It is very beneficial to either rinse your calves a couple of times a day, or have a misting system in the barn. The cool water combined with the breeze generated from the fans helps the animals stay cool in a stuffy barn.

At a show, it is advisable to bring fans and some method of misting or fogging to keep your calves' stress level down in the hot weather. Don't forget to bring a cooler along for personal use as well, filled with cold drinks. Show day is a high stress and high work time for the exhibitors and parents as well as the show calves.

Many fairs at the county and other levels occur when the weather is still hot. While those can be a shower's favorite time, precaution should be taken for the health of the family and the cattle. Katie Williams Area 9 V.P.

Breed News—Simmental

Whether they are red and white or black and white or just plain black.

The Simmental breed has been one of the fastest growing breeds of this century..

Although they might not have always been the most "popular" breed, they have still always been one of the most profitable breeds in the U.S. One of the Simmental breed's biggest advantages is its adaptability. Breeders around the world have created animals that uniquely suit their environment or purpose. From the heat-tolerance of Simbrahs, the superior milk production of Fullbloods, the exceptional beef production of SimAngus, to the heterosis boost of SimGenetics, the Simmental influence generates value at all levels of production. In addition to high value purebred cattle, Simmental genetics' flexibility allows operations to capture genetics from unique British and Continental sources in order to produce specialized animals for cattle exhibitors and other markets in the beef industry. The next time you're having a tough time deciding what to breed your herd to, consider Simmental bulls to better your cow herd."

Katie McNinch—9th Overall % Simmi Born and Bred Heifer

National Junior Board Member—Limousin Eric Birkner

Eric is in his second term as a national board member of the North American Limousin Junior Association (NALJA). Their terms are two years each. Once he was selected for a second term, he was nominated for president and later in the week was elected president. He will serve for the next year and then the following year will remain as Ex-officio on the board. He won in a landslide receiving 78% of the vote. He has become the first NALJA president from Arkansas. Eric is 19 years old and attends the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville. He is pursuing an accounting degree and plans to attend law school. His parents are Carl Birkner and Dr. Linda Birkner from Solgohachia, Arkansas. NALJA board members are responsible for planning the leadership events, regional shows, award banquets and the Jr. National show and satellite events. The board conducts many fundraising events throughout the year. Eric will work the Limousin shows at the NAILE, American Royal and National Western. In his first two year term on the board, Eric traveled over 15,000 miles! As president, Eric will meet with the NALF (North American Limousin Foundation) board of directors, representing the junior members. Eric is a past president of the Arkansas Junior Cattleman's Association and credits much of his success on the national level to the leadership skills he gained here in Arkansas. AJCA is an excellent training ground for young leaders. If someone is interested in pursuing a leadership role on the national level, Eric thinks it is important for them to work at home and gain the skills necessary. The AJCA board is a great place to learn money management, fundraising, parliamentary procedure and just working with people. Serving on a national board is a major commitment, of both time and money. Check out the board you are interested in before deciding to apply. Make sure you understand the commitment and would be able to perform the duties if selected. In addition to traveling to board meetings across the country, you may be called on to speak in a moments notice. It is important that you are very knowledgeable about your breed and the beef industry in general. Also work on your speaking skills! You become a role model. That is an essential quality of a good board member on both the state and national level. Set good examples because you never know when someone might be watching you! NALJA is a youth organization with members across the country. The purpose of the North American Limousin Junior Association is to develop knowledgeable, motivated beef industry leaders while promoting the Limousin breed through fellowship, leadership and education. Eric has been able to work with beef leaders from around the country. The NALJA board members are a select group made up of outstanding leaders. Many of them are now moving on to bigger things. There are two members who will be attending vet school in the future, one currently in law school and a second getting ready to start. The board members work so closely together for several years that they form a very strong bond. Many of them will be lifelong friends. Eric has been a NALJA member for 14 years and this was his 12th consecutive Junior Nationals.

Luke is the 20 year old son of Terry and Becky Bolin and will be a junior at the University of Arkansas, majoring in Animal Science. By being elected to a 3 year term, Luke joins other members on the board from Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Georgia, and Ohio. Luke is the first person from the state of Arkansas to ever run and be elected to the Jr. Shorthorn Board. The AJSA Board consists of 9 directors from across the country and they help serve the over 4,000 members of the American Junior Shorthorn Association. Some duties of an AJSA board member include; assisting with check-in and ring work at the American Royal, NAILE, National Western, and Junior Nationals, as well as traveling the AJSA office in Omaha, Nebraska for quarterly board meetings.

AJSA Board members will also attend the KEY Conference and YBIC (Youth Beef Industry Congress). The main job of the AJSA Board; however, is to be a positive role model for the youth of the Shorthorn breed, feels kansas role asked replied: some-come as well as, work as a advocate for the Shorthorn breed. Luke like the experience and knowledge he has gained from the Ar-Junior Cattleman's Association definitely prepared him for his within the American Junior Shorthorn Association. When what advice he would give to younger AJCA members Luke "Never give up on your dreams, if you work hard enough one will see it and it will pay off, because crazy dreams DO true."

Note from Your President—Caitlin Haley

Wow! I cannot believe that summer '11 has only a few days left. However, this summer has been one of the best. As I look back on this summer I realize how God has truly blessed me. He has provided me with the essentials needed to show cattle. When 6 a.m. rolls around, I am usually thinking, "Why can't I just be a normal teenager and sleep in every day of summer?" Well once I get up and out to the barn, every thought of sleeping in goes away. Not very many people have the ability or opportunity to spend time doing a hobby that all of us in the AJCA have gotten the chance to do. Whether it's watching the baby calves run and buck with each other, or washing calves while the sun comes up, it makes the sweat, early mornings, late nights, and frustration when a calf is not cooperating completely worth it. Showing cattle has allowed me to meet many amazing people that will be life long friends, while getting the chance to come closer to my family. I would never trade the experiences or opportunities that I have come across with showing cattle for anything. When you're out at the barn late at night, frustrated because your calf isn't cooperating, think about how lucky you are to have the chance to be doing what you do. I am looking forward to seeing everyone this fall! Keep working hard!

Note from Your State Director—Michelle Bertschy Rieff

These are exciting times for the Arkansas Jr. Cattlemen's Association. As we move to our year end award activities I find my garage full of prizes that await delivery to the hands of well-deserved winners. August 13th 38 belt buckles along with many, many other awards will be presented to high point exhibitors, leaders in the organization and future leaders of the cattle industry. We welcome the sixty-five AJCA members and their families to the Leaders in G.E.A.R. Achieving and Succeeding Conference. Rhett Laubach, our program speaker will inspire us to take action and get our leadership in gear. Rhett will stress the importance of striving for excellence in everything we do while working to be a person of ethics and strong character. We are honored to have members of the Arkansas Cattlemen's and Arkansas CattleWomen's Associations joining us for the beginning of our leadership conference.

The AJCA Thanksgiving Classic Committee is busy making final plans for our opening sanctioned show of the 2011-2012 show season. We will be back in Conway for a two day show. An addition to the weekend will be the AJCA annual meeting and election of officers. The annual meeting, along with showmanship, will take place on Friday, November 25th. We will be electing a president elect, secretary, youth treasurer, Areas 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 vice presidents and adult advisors and an adult parliamentarian. If you are interested in running for office, please contact me at michellerieff@aol.com or at 479.936.1685 to learn more about the duties of each po-

Officer Article—Cassie Godwin

Hello, AJCA! I hope everyone is having a great summer and staying as cool as possible in this extreme heat! This heat is very hard on all our cattle and us as well. I know that everyone is praying for rain and I have faith that God will bless us in time. This time of the year is very busy for everyone. We are all busy getting ready for school to start, taking care of our animals and enjoying the last few weeks of summer. For the AJCA board members we are also handling the finishing touches on the AJCA Leadership Conference. The conference is going to be awesome! There are going to be great sessions, games, a motivational speaker, and we will honor many exhibitors with year end awards. I hope that everyone has a great time at the conference and learns how to become great leaders.

Leadership is a very important quality to have in today's society. Being a strong leader will help you throughout your life. As Arkansas Junior Cattleman members we are the future of the cattle industry. As we make the transition from Junior Cattleman's to the Arkansas Cattleman's Association we are going to need our leadership skills to help us maintain and improve the cattle industry. A good leader needs to be enlightened, educated, and motivated in the area that they will be serving. The goal of the leadership conference is to build a confident and motivated leader by exposing the participants to the realities, strengths, resources, and needs of the cattle industry. I have graduated high school and I am in college. As I am going through these new experiences I am thankful for my leadership skills. I have attended several AJCA leadership conferences and I have matured as a leader year after year, because of the good training that the Arkansas Junior Cattleman's Association has provided. I challenge the Arkansas Junior Cattleman's members to take advantage of any leadership training that is offered through any organization. You will be a better leader and person because of it.

Farewell Address—Katie Williams

This year AJCA has 3 long time members that will be aging out of our association. We are allowing them to give their farewell address to the association.

Katie Williams of Imboden, Arkansas is the 20 year old daughter of Warren and Melinda Williams. Katie will be a Senior at Williams Baptist College where she is majoring in Liberal Arts with an emphasis in Biology and Communications. Katie has been an AJCA member for 8 years and says that AJCA has helped her connect with other showers within her state and helped her to bond with other cattle people. She says that while she doesn't have a specific 'favorite' memory with the AJCA, the year that she Reserve Overall Commercial Heifer asked what ad-
